

EAT LIKE A HORSE

To eat a lot, greedily, quickly, and more than other people.

.....
This phrase seems to be paradoxical as horses always eat slowly and never greedily. Its origin is unknown.

HAVE EGG ON YOUR FACE

If you have egg on your face then you look silly because you have made an embarrassing mistake.

.....
This idiom originated in the United States in the last century. It may relate to the early days of the theatre when audiences not satisfied with a theatrical performance would throw eggs at the actors.

HAVE TWO LEFT FEET

Someone who is not very good – clumsy – at dancing has two left feet.

Most people are right handed. When they use their left hand, the result is usually awkward. Perhaps the phrase is based on this observation.

RAINING CATS AND DOGS

When someone says "It's raining cats and dogs", he or she means that it is raining heavily.

.....
One theory has it that animals used to sleep on the eaves of the houses in the Victorian era. During a heavy rain they were washed away and fell to the ground. It is likely a false theory.
